support service

A guide for employees

Research shows that being in work has a positive effect on mental wellbeing...

Not only does it allow you to pay the bills, it builds your confidence and offers opportunities for you to socialise.

Our workplace mental health support service will help you to address any difficulties you may have at work due to your mental health condition and support you to take a positive approach to working life, so that you can keep your job.

This confidential and impartial service is available at no cost to you or your employer, if you are absent from work or are finding work difficult due to a mental health condition*. You can also have our help with, or without, the support of your employer.

*Eligibility criteria apply.

Our consultants are fully trained professionals with specialist expertise in mental health and its impact on the workplace and will help you by:

About us

At Remploy, we believe in greater inclusion and equality for disabled and disadvantaged people through sustainable employment.

We are passionate and committed to equipping people like you with the skills and confidence you need to build enduring careers.

By working with employers and other partners to help them understand disabilities and mental health conditions, we are transforming the lives of thousands of individuals through lasting and meaningful employment.

Remploy is working in partnership with Access to Work, a Jobcentre Plus scheme, to deliver this service to people with a mental health condition, who are either absent from work or finding work difficult.
