FSA investigation into horse DNA found in some burgers

The Food Safety Authority of Ireland (FSAI) reported yesterday (Tuesday, 15 January) that an analysis they carried out into the authenticity, or labelling accuracy, of a number of burger products revealed that some contained horse and pig DNA.

It can be confirmed that Campbell Brothers do not produce, purchase or trade in equine products.

It can also be confirmed that no products from the suppliers involved are used in the manufacturing process to produce burgers or any other manufactured products.

For ease of reference the FSAI report can be reviewed on their website at www.fsai.ie. This website can provide a link to the published report and Table of Results which confirms level of detection and products that have been affected.

Please do not hesitate to contact me direct should you require any further information.

Yours faithfully
